Honors Section
How is PLCY 210H different from PLCY 210?
PLCY 210H will attend the same lectures and complete the same assignments as PLCY 210. Both sections will prepare and complete a policy brief throughout the semester. PLCY 210H, however, will have some additional assignments and be expected to cover some topics in slightly more detail (e.g., markets, economic principles, etc.) and a longer policy brief. PLCY 210H will be responsible for additional (short) assignments on a semiweekly basis that contribute to the class lecture and discussion material. These assignments will be announced in class and are part of the “Assignments” grade. Additional details about the responsibilities of students in PLCY 210H are contained below.

Additional / Modified Assignments
Course Journal Assignments: Students are required to keep a bi-weekly course journal throughout the semester. I will alternate between assigning topics for journaling and asking students to journal on current events related to their own interest. More details about the specific assignments will be given weekly during the Thursday section. I will collect journals periodically during the semester and at the end of the course. These journal assignments will be included in the “Assignments” portion of your grade. All “Assignments” are worth 30% of your final grade.

Other Assignments: You may be assigned other brief assignments (e.g., short writing assignments, additional reading materials for class discussion, or problems sets) throughout the semester. Any additional assignments will be included in the “Assignments” portion of your grade. All “Assignments” are worth 30% of your final grade.

Policy Briefs: Policy Briefs in the Honors section will be structured like the regular section. PLCY 210H, however, will be responsible for developing a more detailed policy brief. I will ask you to complete the policy brief over time with several deliverables due throughout the semester. More details will be available throughout the semester and on the syllabus calendar. Just like PLCY 210, the policy briefs you prepare will be worth 30% of your final grade.
